NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS
MAINTENANCE OF CUSTOMER OWNED GAS LINES

Natural gas is delivered to your home or business through an underground pipeline. The underground pipeline to your home or business is called a service line, and you may own a portion of that service line. You are responsible for maintaining all gas piping which you own, including any that extends beyond the meter to the appliances in your home or business.

If buried piping is not maintained, over time it may be subject to the hazards of corrosion and leakage. For your safety, we inspect service lines for leakage on a regular basis, and if the line is metallic, it is the customer's responsibility to have an inspection down stream of the meter. However, we do not maintain or repair customer-owned piping.

If our inspection detects a problem in any portion of the piping that you own, the gas piping will need to be repaired promptly. A plumber or excavation contractor can assist you in repairing the line. Excavation around gas pipelines should be done by hand. Before digging, contact your local utility locate service to learn where gas lines are located on your property. PLEASE, FOR SAFETY'S SAKE, CALL BEFORE YOU DIG.

I/We have read this application prior to signing it, and agree to its terms and conditions.
